NOTES

1. States may choose to either determine the categorical Medicaid eligibility of their aged, blind, and disabled residents, or have the Social Security Administration (SSA) make these determinations for them. The "Medicaid Determination" column reflects the selected option.

   ☐ The State has an agreement with the SSA under Section 1634 of the Social Security Act. The SSA makes the Medicaid eligibility determination for individuals eligible for benefits under the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) Program. (31 States and the District of Columbia)

   ▨ The State, using SSI eligibility criteria, makes its own Medicaid eligibility determination for SSI eligibles. (7 States and the Northern Mariana Islands)

   ▦ The State uses more restrictive criteria than those of the SSI Program to determine Medicaid eligibility for SSI eligibles. A State that elects this option is commonly referred to as a "209(b) State." Section 209(b) of Public Law 92-603 later became Section 1902(f) of the Social Security Act. (12 States)

   ■ The Medicaid determination option is not applicable.

2. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 allows for the provision of home and community care to functionally disabled elderly individuals who are either medically needy or eligible for Medicaid under the SSI Program. Texas and Rhode Island have elected this option.
3. Under the authority of Section 1115 of the Social Security Act, the State has expanded access to its Medicaid program to include the uninsured. Health care benefits, especially appropriate for AFDC and AFDC-related groups, are delivered through capitated managed care plans. More definitive information may be obtained from the State.
